Spring break webcams keep an eye on the action

March 5, 2009

Anxious, overprotective parents and creepy, cubicle-dwelling voyeurs alike have a new weapon in their arsenal: Spring Break webcams. Whether those crazy kids are partying in Myrtle Beach or Venice Beach, South Padre Island or South Beach, Cancun or Waikiki, you can keep a watchful eye.

EarthCam, the Internet's premier global webcam network, today launched its annual Spring Break Cams.

The live EarthCam "Spring Break" scene takes visitors from outside Coco Bongo, one of the hot Cancun nightspots, to surfer holidays in Baja, Mexico, and Aliso Beach near Laguna, California. EarthCam viewers will also enjoy the sunbathers in Puerto Rico, as well as see the celebrants on the move in Myrtle Beach and on the streets of some favorite college hot spots.

And new this year, the live views are also offered for iPhone and iPod Touch users at http://mobile.earthcam.com/iphone/springbreak/.
