

Live webcam at Abbey Road shows Beatles fans miming the greats August 5, 2010

Love the Beatles? Then you're sure to love the live webcam posted at Abbey Road, which is documenting all kinds of tourists mimicking the greats as they crossed the street in 1969 for the cover of their final album as a group. Some tourists embarrassingly jump and down with glee when they safely reach the other side of the street. And when people aren't crossing, you might catch one of those famous red double-decker buses cruising past, a UPS truck or some British children on their way to school. What's better than a peek at real life?

Check out one image the camera captured!

Prime Minister Stephen Harper and his family cross Abbey Road where the Beatles were pictured for the cover of their Abbey Road album years earlier. The Prime Minister toured the Abbey Road recording studios in London England April 3, 2009. The tour was a 50th birthday gift set up by his wife Lauren.