

Get the new year on the Internet

December 31, 2008

SANTIAGO .- Time to lay off 2008 and received the 2009, and for those who do not want to miss a detail or the Internet has some advantages.

Basis, Google offers a "gadget"-a small program that can be installed on the desktop computer, which is a clock that is doing the countdown for the new year. But Google offers not only tools of type, different pages can be found countdown for various reasons and details. But beware, some are not suited to local time so easily.

And if his dream is to spend some time at midnight New York, the legendary Times Square, where is one of the shows most popular New Year in the world, the video site Hulu can make it happen.

This, it will be broadcast live from the new year this city of the United States for 2009 along with the thousands who gather here each year. However, there are two hours less than in Chile, so you can celebrate with the family first, and then, with New Yorkers.

Another site, Earthcam also broadcast live from Times Square. But also has web cameras located in different parts of the world to see how 2009 will receive in other countries.

Through Earthcam, you can see the celebrations in Moscow, London, Prague and in various U.S. cities.
