

EarthCam: See Bristol Motor Speedway transform into a 150,000-seat football stadium

University of Tennessee set to play Virginia Tech on Sept. 10

The transformation of Bristol Motor Speedway from a 160,000-seat NASCAR track to a 150,000-seat college football stadium continues ahead of the scheduled Sept. 10 game between the University of Tennessee and Virginia Tech.

Organizers of the event hope to break the all-time college football attendance record of an estimated 120,000 that turned out to watch a game at Soldier Field in Chicago between Notre Dame and Southern California in 1927.

The project can be seen via web cams in real time by clicking HERE. Once completed, the website will offer a time-lapse video of the construction.

While the idea of a football game at Bristol has our attention, what we'd really like to see is a football game in the infield DURING a NASCAR race. Now, that's entertainment.
