

Watch the Ultra Mainstage Come to Life on This Miami Live Stream

It's going to be big

By Beatport News Staff Mar 22, 2015

Every March, the team at Ultra Music Festival sets out to build a more spectacular main stage than what's come before. In 2013, Ultra promised 'The Most Technically Advanced Main Stage Design in History,' and the results were dazzling. 2014 then brought 'The Vortex,' with the DJ booth set inside a worm-hole of LED panels and hypnotic lighting.

So, how will Ultra one-up itself in 2015? With under a week until gates open at Bayfront Park, the festival is currently keeping its plans under wraps. However, curious fans can get a sneak preview thanks to EarthCam.

As reported by Dancing Astronaut, you can watch the main stage build happening (and get a look at the weather) live on the downtown feed. In addition to the main stage, construction is also underway on the structure that houses both the Carl Cox & Friends and A State of Trance lineups, plus the Ultra Worldwide and Resistance stages. Watch EarthCam's Bayfront Park feed here.

