

Celebrate George Harrison’s Birthday With The Live Abbey Road EarthCam!

February 25, 2015 12:32 PM by Alisha Jackson

One of our favorite things about The Beatles, is that they will never fade away.

The band is just as relevant today as they were when they called it quits 45 years ago.

And the birthday candles for the members who have since passed, shine just as bright all these years later.

Two big things are happening today in celebration of what would have been George Harrison’s 72nd birthday.

First, the George Harrison Memorial Tree, which died from a beetle infestation (no really – click here for the story) will be replanted in Griffith Park today.

And second, Earthcam has set up shop at Abbey Road.

In order to transport to Abbey Road, all you need is love (and a computer).

Click here for the live video feed.

Why did EarthCam decide to go live today? Read their touching statement below:

They say it’s your (72nd) birthday, George Harrison – happy birthday to you! Remember the “quiet Beatle” and his immense impact on music with EarthCam’s live webcam at Abbey Road, thanks to its partnership with Abbey Road Studios in London.

We hope you enjoy your ‘day trip’ to Abbey Road!

