

Watch as Super Bowl Boulevard Comes to Life with EarthCams New Time-Lapse Movie

New York (PRWEB) February 01, 2014

The biggest sporting event of the year, Super Bowl XLVIII, is only one day away and there is no shortage of festivities leading up to the big game. FOX Sports has set up a special stage right in the heart of Times Square and Super Bowl Boulevard, a 14-block outdoor celebration, has taken over this famous city spot. EarthCams webcams caught all the hard work it took to create this Super Bowl reporting hub and adventure land and is sharing the entire process with their new time-lapse movie.

Captured in crisp detail by two different webcams, watch as the FOX Sports stage and various spots throughout Super Bowl Boulevard take shape. The time-lapse features a highlight reel of the action from four unique angles for a total viewing experience. Watch as crews put all the pieces of the stage into place, including the finishing touches of the LED screens and FOX Sports official mascot, Cleatus the Robot. Catch a glimpse as the Roman numerals that accompany every Super Bowl make their grand debut and watch as the teams prep the performance for all the entertainment acts that will wow the crowds. Guest have the chance to step onto the field and try their luck at scoring 3 points by kicking a field goal. The final image of the time-lapse is touchdown-worthy and will have viewers cheering from the sidelines, with a gigapixel panorama showcasing all things football in Times Square in an impressive way.

This Super Bowl Boulevard experience is brought to people around the world thanks to EarthCam and its trusted partners in Times Square including SL Green, Clear Channel Outdoor, Sherwood Outdoor and Nygard International.

In addition to documenting all the activity in Times Square, EarthCam construction cameras were onsite to document construction of this years host stadium, MetLife Stadium. Showcasing progress from August 7, 2007 to March 7, 2010, a time-lapse movie of the project invites sports fans to watch as the $1.6 billion vision becomes a reality in just 50 action-packed seconds.
