

Times Square New Year's Eve 2015 ball drop live stream: Watch online

by Mike Dyce 01-01-15

If you can't be in New York City, or don't want to venture out into the cold and the crowds, you can watch the ball drop for New Year's Eve in Times Square from the comfort of your home and on the couch.

What is New Year's Eve with out the traditional ball drop in Times Square in New York City. Arguably the most iconic New Year's Eve celebration in the world, and far away the most iconic in the United States, it would seem wrong to not ring in the new year without watching.

Unfortunately only a small percentage live near Times Square and more don't want to deal with the nearly million people crowding the area to watch it in person. But don't worry, there are ways to watch it at home from the comfort of your couch and in the nice warm heat.

If you'd like to watch on the internet, a live stream is available on U-Stream which can be watched below. One of the benefits of watching online is coverage beginning at 6 p.m. ET, which is several hours earlier than when broadcast networks start their coverage.

If you don't like that angle, EarthCam is also going to stream the celebration from multiple camera angles. Their video stream kicks off at 10 p.m. ET.

There are also various apps in the Apple Store and Google Play that will host the official live stream as well. Both of those apps are free to boot.
