

Kaleidoscope Eyes

Peregrine Falcons' Last Clutch in Current Home

Posted March 9, 2017

Three months ago I looked across at the Tappan Zee Bridge and wondered if the falcon nest was over there on a beam. It moves to a new home this year.

This will be the last year the Peregrine falcon mama hatches her eyases — word has it she's pregnant — in her current home/nest before moving day.

I'd like to know what you think.

