

St. Louis News: EarthCam shares construction time-lapse of Gateway Arch Museum

By Marty Smith • July 2, 2018

ST. LOUIS, MO — A press release was published today by EarthCam, distributed by PR Newswire offering the following:

WHAT: Tuesday, July 3 will be an exciting day for the city of St. Louis, Missouri, as the newly renovated Gateway Arch Museum will officially open to the public. EarthCam is joining the festivities by sharing its 4K construction time-lapse movie for the updated museum and visitor's center. See the entire project from start to finish in just 70 seconds!

WHY: EarthCam's construction cameras were onsite from February 2014 to March 2018 to document each stage of the unique restoration project. This project is the largest public-private partnership in National Park Service history, led by the Gateway Arch Park Foundation, Bi-State Development Agency, Jefferson National Parks Association, Great Rivers Greenway and the National Park Service. The iconic American landmark is now more accessible than ever before, welcoming a whole new generation of visitors.

HOW: Celebrate this milestone event and watch EarthCam's 4K construction time-lapse movie for the Gateway Arch Museum.
