Thousands of Chicago Cubs fans were gathered outside Wrigley Field on Wednesday night when the team won the World Series, and ended its 108-year curse.

An Earth Cam feed outside of the stadium captured the moment when the massive crowd went from nail-biting silence to deafening cheers worthy of a century-long wait.

Local station WGN TV captured the euphoria from another angle.

With a series-ending game that turned into a extra-innings nail-biter, the die-hard fans at Wrigley Field weren't the only folks who were celebrating.
