

Severe Weather: Watch the 2017 Northeast Snowstorm on Webcams!!

February 9, 2017 by Will Run For Miles

an Earthcam view of Times Square, NYC

It's Thursday morning. Yesterday, the temperatures were in the 60s. Today, we're in the middle of a major snowstorm. A blizzard. School is canceled. Flights canceled. We're told to stay home. Except me. My office is open. I have to go to work. Ack.

Did you know you can watch the blizzard via live-streaming webcam at multiple locations? EarthCam, a webcam global leader has numerous all-weather webcams at many highly trafficked tourism locations – so you can watch the blizzard in real time without having to step foot out the door (except for me because I have to go to work today!).

to access the Earthcam webcams, go to this LINK.

or, watch Times Square Live.

or, watch Wall Street Live.

or, watch Boston Live.

There are white outs all over New York. I don't want to go out there! Why do I have to go to work today?